O'Donovan Waste, a leading waste management company specialising in construction and demolition waste continues to surpass industry standards in terms of compliance and safety. Having achieved multiple accreditations including numerous ISO standards and FORS Gold, the multi award-winning firm has now added the new Mission Zero accreditation after meticulously meeting and surpassing all audit requirements.

Mission Zero is a comprehensive quality standard for the road fleet sector. Based on a full legal compliance audit, Mission Zero incorporates industry best practice and is officially recognised as meeting contractual requirements including TfL Work-Related Road Risk (WRRR) and CLOCS.

“O'Donovan is committed to meeting and exceeding the highest standards in safety, compliance and best practice within our industry,” commented Jacqueline O'Donovan, Managing Director. “Achieving the Mission Zero accreditation further validates our ongoing dedication to ensure excellence and conformity across our fleet operations whilst also placing the safety and welfare of our employees, clients and the general public as an integral part of our business, reinforcing our pledge to improve road safety for all.”

Nick Caesari, CEO Mission Zero said: “With O'Donovan Waste being one of the leading protagonists in driving standards within the transport industry, we are incredibly proud to welcome them as one of our Mission Zero accredited operators”.
