The timely and efficient transport of samples into the laboratory is critical to the running of any sampling project. In order to aid the logistical element of the analytical process ALS Environmental are proud to announce they have launched four new drop-off locations around the UK, based in Newcastle Upon Tyne, Crayford (Kent), Redhill (South London) and Stoke on Trent, with their Leeds location being moved nearer the M1. These locations are active from Monday 1st August 2016.

The increased drop-off coverage will allow customers to deliver samples to ALS without incurring any collection charges. To ensure full traceability at any of the drop-off locations, ALS kindly request that customers book a consignment number prior to dropping samples into their drop-off facilities. This enables them to track and trace your samples from delivery right through to reporting your analytical data.

ALS Environmental's new drop-off locations increase their geographical coverage of the UK and swiftly follow the opening of their Otterbourne laboratory. The new locations will give ALS Environmental a greater presence in Kent, South London, the Midlands and the North East of England.

Belinda MacLachlan, ALS Environmental Customer Service and Interface Manager, has been driving the drop-off project and comments:

Our portfolio of drop-off locations have doubled over the last 12 months in line with our strategic plans to offer a range of logistical solutions for our customers. The latest round of drop-off locations will enable us to provide a better service across the UK.
